

I remember when my friend Pablo and I used to go to EOI's park all Wednesdays evenings after English lessons. There were a lot of kinds of trees, bushes and plants.

However, the tree we liked the most was the plum-tree. We usually sat next to them, talked about anecdotes and funny stories and ate some plums at the same time as well ! I can almost feel the warmth of the sun on our legs and our faces. Thinking about those experiences we had, I am completely sure those plum-trees knew all our secrets as we talked to each other about everything concerning our personal lives.

We really enjoyed those days.

However, not long ago, I visited this park and it was almost unrecognizable due to the fact it had been turned into a marketing company. The worst things I saw was that all trees had been removed from the garden. Actually, there was no vegetation anywhere, something which really made me sad.

Anyway, we have to understand things are constantly changing and there are no ways to avoid it.

Obviously, I would have liked to see the flora was in EOI's park to feel the same again, I mean, to feel the same smells, tastes, etc...

After my visit, I decided to call my friend Pablo and told him about what had happened. He got as sad as me. Nevertheless, he thought the same: things are always changing and we must accept that fact or reality. No options.
